

Orexin neurons have a role in sensorimotor response

Key point: Hypocretin/orexin neuron activity is necessary for initiation of normal locomotor responses to external sensory stimuli. The subsecond-scale sensorimotor control by orexin neurons could be viewed as reminiscent of a motor rather than an arousal system.

BURDAKOV, D., SUBSECOND ENSEMBLE DYNAMICS OF OREXIN NEURONS; in FNN VOLUME 45.
DOI: 10.1159/000514957